Letter from the Board Chair

Dear Supporters and Friends:

Never in the history of the Virginia Public Access Project (VPAP) has the staff or your contributions worked harder than in this past year. The 2021 political cycle had twists that were novel and, at times, confusing. VPAP deftly adapted to the numerous changes and shifting turnout patterns.

- For the first time, the Republican Party used “ranked-choice” voting to select their nominees for statewide office.
- The responsibility for drawing new legislative lines was given to a voter-approved Redistricting Commission and, later, the Supreme Court of Virginia.
- In the Governor’s race, a surge in rural turnout eclipsed the heft of Northern Virginia.

I’m pleased to say that each step of the way, the nonpartisan Virginia Public Access Project was there, providing unique insights that fulfilled our mission of elevating the public understanding of Virginia politics.

Thank you for making our work possible. In the past year, which we started with a deficit budget, the Board of Directors added two new staffers to handle the added work of redistricting and the governor’s race.

As we did more, we hoped you would respond.

And you did! We are grateful that in 2021 many of our longtime supporters deepened their commitment to the vision of an inclusive democracy powered by an informed electorate. And we were thrilled to add 450 first-time donors—big and small—to this annual report.

We begin our 25th year with clear purpose and gratitude for your confidence and support.

Regards,

Elevating Public Understanding

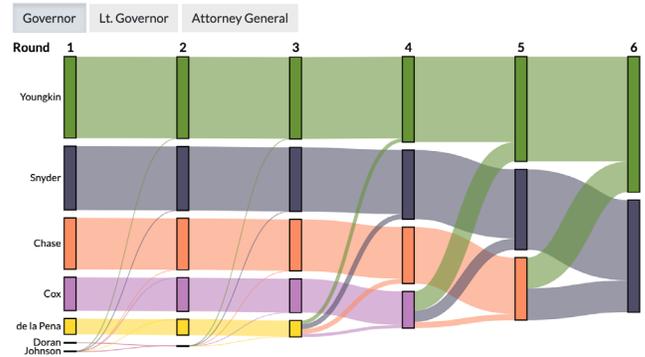

In 2021, VPAP stepped up to provide the public with information and insights that could not be found anywhere else.

Ranked-Choice Voting

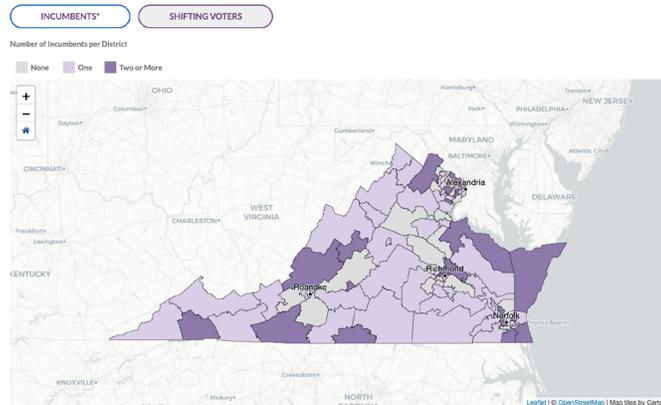

In May, VPAP explained the process used by the Republican Party of Virginia to select its candidates for Governor, Lt. Governor and Attorney General.

During the tabulation process, there were more than 1 million page views on vpap.org.

This graphic shows each nominee's path to victory.

How current/proposed districts relate

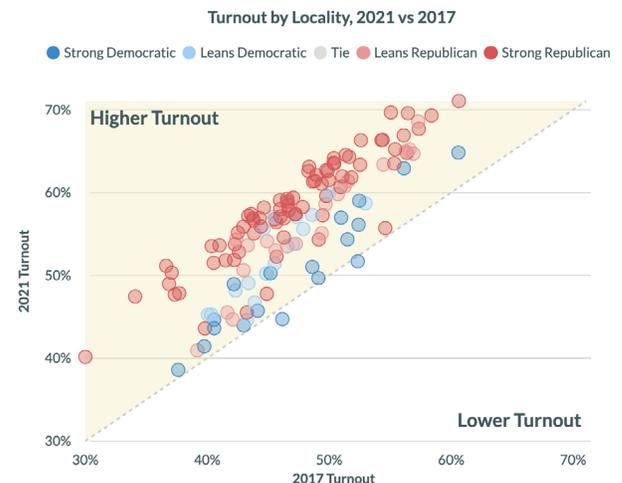

Your Representative Might Change

A process that historically had taken place behind closed doors burst into open view this fall. VPAP provided exclusive charts, maps and analyses that gave voters an idea of how their districts—and elected representatives—would change.

Election Night

After two years of complete Democratic control of state government, Virginia voters in November 2021 chose a different path. Those who tuned into vpap.org on Election Night could see how record turnout in rural areas helped shape the outcome.

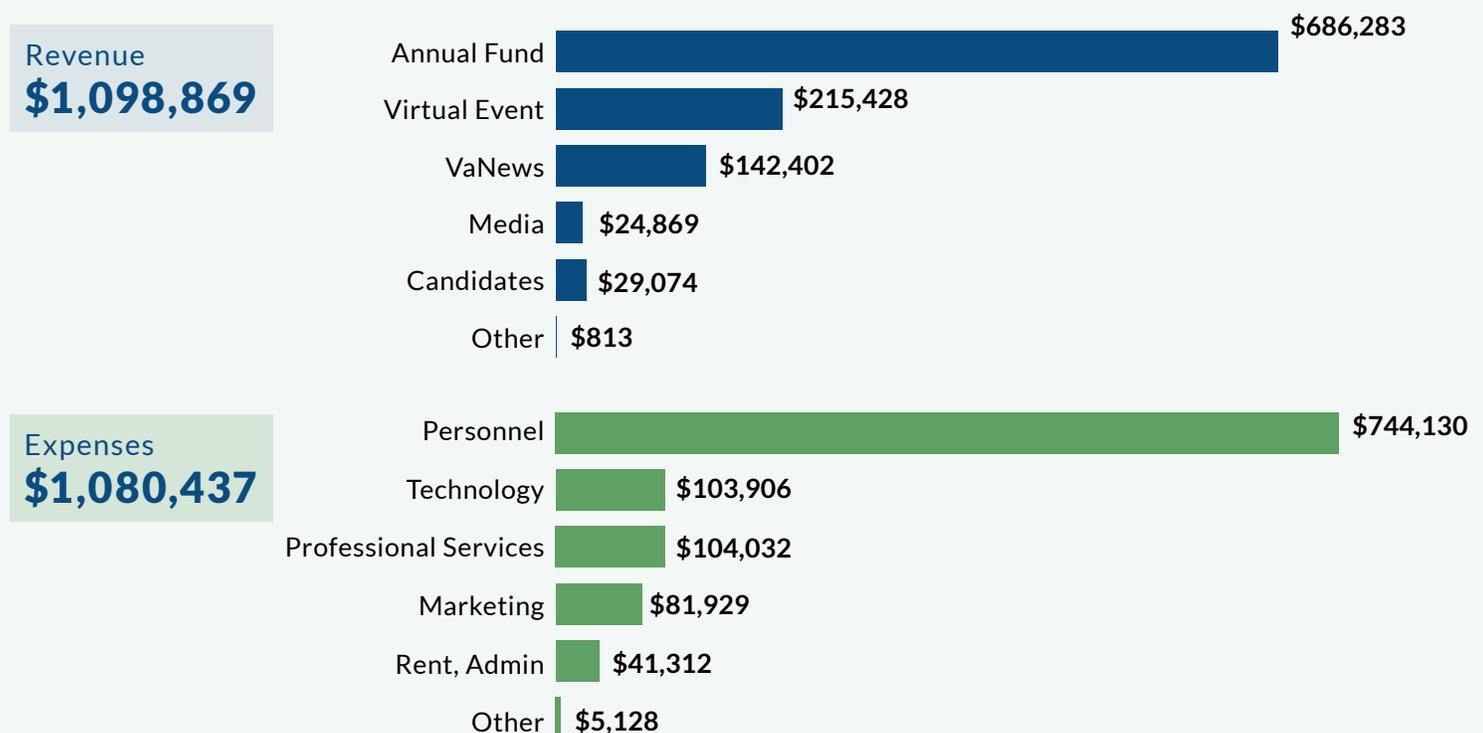

Our 2021 Supporters

What an awesome resource @vpapupdates has been. Few states have such a resource. But they all should. Support VPAP and other great orgs like it.

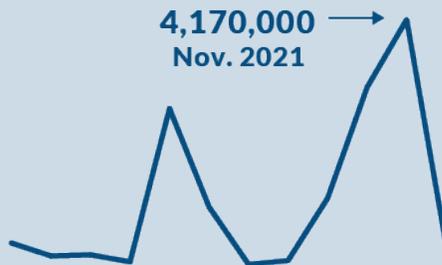

And always follow the money.
